BORROWING PLAN OF RIVERS IS HELD AS UNNECESSARY

Carmichael Says Special Session Would Give Teachers' 4 Million Back Pay With No New Taxes

By The Associated Press.
An immediate special session of the Georgia legislature would pay $4,000,000 teachers' back salaries, finance fully school, health and welfare programs—and provide $1,000,000 more for highways than they had in 1938," Representative James V. Carmichael predicted in a statement made last night.

Urging an immediate call of the legislature he added, "the legislature can and will do all this without a sales tax, gross receipts tax, or any other new tax levy."

Carmichael requested senators and house members to telegraph their presiding officers tomorrow on their views regarding an immediate special session.

Carmichael, who is vice chairman of the house economy committee, declared it was needless for Governor Rivers to borrow money to run the schools because "any borrowing will only postpone the fatal pay day—the proper way to finance the schools is to let the legislature meet now and finance this program."

He apparently was referring to a state school board meeting set for Wednesday to consider a request that Georgia start paying teachers in September instead of October. The request would carry an appeal that the Governor borrow to start the terms.

Two Proposals Urged.
The committee urged repeal of an income tax law provision permitting deduction of federal taxes before figuring state income tax due and pegging gasoline taxes for allocated purposes at the June 30, 1938, figure. Both proposals were estimated to expand state income $3,500,000 a year.

If the session waited until 1940, Carmichael said "there will be another year's evasion under the income tax law and the surplus of $5,000,000 in the Highway Department, in all probability, will be spent for purposes far less desirable than teachers' salaries."

Taxes on incomes are figured and assessed by calendar year earnings. Carmichael said the $5,000,000 surplus in the Highway Department would come from two years' installments of a highway bond issue ratified in the June 6 general election.

The vice chairman observed the economy committee found that "the great trouble was not that the state didn't have money, but that the great trouble was that money which the state did receive went largely for purposes not included in the general (fund) appropriation of $21,000,000."

He explained, "the shortage was in the general fund which supports schools, health, Milledgeville (state insane hospital), etc., while highways, game and fish and other services operating on allocated funds received not only

Color Detecting Device To Prove Boon to Pharmacists

This microscopic invention of Dr. Kenneth L. Kelly, of Washington, differentiates between 317 varying shades. Dr. Kelly says that with the aid of this color detecting machine, which the American Pharmaceutical Association's pharmacopoeia is considering making standard equipment for all druggists, a pharmacist will have an absolute test as to a drug's purity and its quality. He is telling Miss Betty Taylor that with the use of the machine and its accompanying color chart, pharmacists can always assure the customer he is getting exactly the drug ingredients, even to strength and color, that the doctor ordered.

3 ARE APPOINTED TO BARBER BOARD

Vandhitch, Langley, Foster Named To Direct City Group's Activities.

Appointment of a three-man barber board to regulate prices and working conditions of barbers in Atlanta was announced yesterday by Mayor Hartsfield in a communication presented to city council.

J. W. Vandhitch was named secretary of the board to serve a three-year term. Other members are W. D. Langley, appointed for a two-year term, and Homer C. Foster, one-year term. The appointment was in compliance with a recent ordinance passed by city council setting up the board.

Brevity marked the council's meeting. At 2 o'clock members settled themselves comfortably in cushioned chairs, lit cigars and prepared for the usual two or three-hour session. At 3 o'clock they rose, filed out of the council chamber.

Their transactions included the following:
1. Sent to city attorney's office a request from city employees that rules and regulations be drawn for administration of the civil service act.

2. Voted Councilman John Marler's resolution to pay salaries of city employees on September 2 instead of September 5, since Labor Day falls on September 4.

3. Named Dewey Johnson, superintendent of electrical affairs, to the electrical committee of the National Fire Protective Association, representing the United States Conference of Mayors.

Like Ferdinand of storybook and film fame, the councilmen preferred to smell the flowers yesterday rather than wage verbal battles. Councilman John A. White introduced a resolution asking that dogwood trees be transplanted from the prison farm to the city hall grounds. It passed. At the next meeting he said he planned to request the Women's Chamber of Commerce to urge the planting of dogwoods at residences all over the city.

The request for a set of rules and regulations for the administration of the civil service act came from Local No. 3 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Union.

Medical Care Held Antidote To Poverty

Dr. Sanford Tells Druggists Education Also Needed To Halt Crime.

Medical education and care were put forth as the antidote to crime and poverty by Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System of Georgia, in an address last night before a dinner-meeting of the American Pharmaceutical Association, now in its eighty-seventh annual convention at the Biltmore hotel.

"If a state provides wisely for medical education and medical care, it will reduce the cost of maintaining jails, almshouses, eleemosynary institutions, courts and police more than the cost necessary to provide for medical colleges, schools of pharmacy, nursing, and public health," Dr. Sanford said.

"We drain a swamp at public expense but we permit human reservoirs of disease to circulate among us at will," he added.

Dr. Sanford said no matter how much was being spent training doctors, surgeons, pharmacists and nurses, it is not enough. "There is a wide gap between our capacity for medical service and what the people are able to obtain," the chancellor declared. "The solution to our maladjustment between medicine and social order is not one to be solved without education."

The dinner was sponsored by the American Association of Schools of Pharmacy and the American Association of Pharmacy Boards, affiliated organizations of the pharmaceutical association.

HOSPITAL WORK AHEAD OF PLANS

Freeman Answers PWA Order To Show Progress on State Project.

Georgia state officials, ordered by the Public Works Administration to give evidence of building activity by August 31 on the $4,000,000 State Hospital for the Insane at Milledgeville, or lose a $1,800,000 PWA grant yesterday, announced that the work, started several months ago, was progressing satisfactorily.

"I am not alarmed about our schedule of work," Chairman R. H. Freeman Jr., of the state hospital authority, said in Macon yesterday.

"I believe, and have been so advised by architects on the work, that we are ahead of our schedule. We have been advised from time to time of what is required."

Freeman said he was sure the project will be completed by June 30, next year, the time limit set by congress for completion of PWA projects. Every contract has been let except one for a heating plant, he stated.

In Atlanta, director John C. Lewis of the authority said he understood the project was "just about abreast of schedule."

PWA warning was issued from Washington to speed up 67 contracts said to be lagging throughout the nation. It said that if Georgia did not show evidence of building activity by August 31, the contract would be cancelled.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation has agreed to lend the state $2,200,000 to provide its 55 per cent of the funds to match PWA's 45 per cent grant.

Fund Shortage.
Lewis explained the project got off to a late start because of lack of funds at first.

Georgia got its first installment of the $1,800,000 federal grant about six weeks ago. It was approximately $600,000.

Works Projects Administration labor provided for renovations and repairs on existing buildings at the hospital brings the total cost of the expansion program to about $5,000,000.

Other projects bringing a Washington warning were the Birmingham $1,523,104 street paving program and the Mobile $22,019,455 tunnel.

GRAND JURY SEEKS BEST WAY TO TELL RESULTS OF WORK

Strategy in Presentments To Be Decided Today; Sewer, Clemency Investigations Pushed.

Fulton county's grand jury will decide today upon its strategy in revealing the results of its investigation into the many phases of the county administration, following announcement yesterday by half a dozen subcommittees that they have practically completed their findings.

The most effective method of presenting them to the court and the public is what the jurors will try to determine. Some members are said to be in favor of returning separate presentments on each of the problems considered.

Sewer Records Seized.

It developed yesterday that the records of three sewer projects which were impounded last week by the grand jury were the Adams project, near Cascade road; Longwood drive project, between Howell Mill road and Northside drive, and the Claire drive project, extending from near Stewart avenue to the city limits.

In connection with the criticisms of the county in refusing to recognize contracts entered into between the city and the T. E. Collier estate, officials of the sewer department yesterday cited an opinion from the county legal department to the effect that the contract had no legal status.

Clemency Record Studied.

While the grand jury as a body prepared to wind up its two-month study of county affairs, a special subcommittee investigating pardons, paroles and suspended sentences yesterday held a meeting to study the records of about 20 persons convicted in the criminal court of Fulton county who have received clemency in some form or another.

As the committee was meeting, the clerk of the criminal court received two more executive pardons. One ordered the release of Charlie Brown, white lottery operator, under a 12-month sentence, and the other freed Leon Harris, negro lottery operator, also under a 12-month sentence.

Committee members themselves called for the record of Walt Jones, who was sentenced to serve 24 months and fined $2,000 for illegal liquor sales. He was granted a pardon several months before his appeal was passed upon by the Georgia court of appeals.

LEOPOLD ASKS OSLO NATIONS TO SEEK PEACEFUL SOLUTION

European Diplomats Bewildered by Proposed Soviet-Nazi Treaty; Official Quarters Silent.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

The announcement that Germany and Soviet Russia had reached an agreement to conclude a non-aggression pact burst in Europe like a bombshell leaving officials stunned and bewildered.

The move was described in London as a "master stroke" by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler that may prove a shattering blow to Polish integrity.

Although the effect of the new treaty on the European situation was still uncertain, it was believed in many high circles that it would mean the breakdown of military staff talks of Great Britain, France and Russia with little hope of a treaty between the three powers being negotiated.

As cabinets in Great Britain and in France prepared to hold emergency sessions, King Leopold III called foreign ministers of six other small neutral nations, who are associated in the Oslo trade, to join Belgium in a plea for a peaceful settlement of major powers' quarrels, setting the meeting for tomorrow.

The nations involved the Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland.

Artillery Moves Up.

Meanwhile from Gleiwitz, Germany, came reports that the area facing the Polish border was bristling with military activity, with men, guns and equipment moving toward the frontiers.

In Warsaw bewildered Polish leaders clung to a faint hope that Soviet Russia will find it expedient to enter into a political military alliance with Great Britain and France despite her consent to a non-aggression pact with Germany. However, many well-informed observers in Poland believed the agreement between Moscow and Berlin was the death-knell of Anglo-French-Soviet negotiations.

Official Warsaw quarters refused to comment on the German-Soviet announcement, however, preferring to learn what the new British and French moves will be before taking a stand.

At the same time Britons in Poland were advised by their embassy to leave as soon as possible and Poland was reported intensifying military preparations along precautionary lines.

Officials in southeastern Europe at announcement of the German-Soviet pact became jittery. The first reaction of many was one of consternation. In Hungary, Slovakia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia officials were frank to state the pact may mark a major turning in world history.

Polish Collapse Feared.

For immediate consequences they feared it might lead to the collapse of Poland. The future of the cabinets of Chamberlain in London and Daladier in Paris also was believed by many to be involved.

For many countries the non-aggression treaty raised the possibility of close co-operation between a growing Germany and a giant Russia which might have untold consequences for these smaller countries located between them.

"Poland might just as well lay down her arms tonight," said one official. "At least she can escape physical annihilation in that manner."

Complete shifts in Europe's opposing camps were predicted as a result of what one diplomat dolefully called "Russia's joining the anti-comintern pact."

At Bratislava, capital of Slovakia, officials were jubilant, freely predicting their little nation would receive generous slices of Continued in Page 2, Column 5.

WPA TO BE CUT 4,300 IN GEORGIA

Congress Ruling Forces Firings From State's Rolls by September.

Work relief rolls in the state will be cut from 44,490 to 40,190 by September 1, Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state WPA administrator, announced yesterday.

September quota figure, set by Colonel F. C. Harrington, federal administrator, includes workers employed on other federal projects, such as parks, army and entomology, and the Federal Writers' Project. Last August 16, state WPA officials said, there were 43,063 WPA relief workers, 178 writers and 1,251 listed for other federal agencies.

Miss Shepperson stated WPA rolls would be brought within the new quota by dismissing approximately 5,000 relief workers who have been on projects continuously for 18 months and who, according to terms of the last relief act, must be dropped for at least 30 days. Only war veterans are exempt.

State office reported the breakdown of the new cut by areas would probably be completed today.

Fly Lands on Horse; All 'Heck' Breaks Loose

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 21.—A fly landed on a horse's back in Lee Peebles' barn, thereby starting a chain of trouble.

The horse flicked its tail at the fly. The tail caught in a threshing machine and was torn off. The machine was damaged badly. Threshing operations were postponed indefinitely. The fly got away.

Nonaggression Accord Expected to Break Down Military Talks of Britain, France and Russia.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—(AP)

Germany upset the whole structure of the tense middle European situation by announcing shortly before midnight tonight that she will conclude a non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia.

If there is to be a conflict as a result of the Polish-German dispute over Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish corridor) it now appeared certain that vast Russia will be neutral.

The position of Poland, which had been counting on the effectiveness of what Germany calls the "democratic encirclement policy," appeared to have been weakened greatly.

German Troops Mass.

German soldiers were massing on the Polish frontier, and now it seemed certain that if they are called upon to march eastward they will not have to worry about the possibility of encountering Russian troops somewhere in middle Poland.

Germany's announcement of its diplomatic "putsch" startled all Europe.

It apparently meant that the months-long efforts of Britain and France to induce Russia to enter a front to back up Poland, Rumania and other smaller European countries against aggression had failed.

For, according to the German announcement Russia had agreed not to fight Germany.

Cited Master Stroke.

The announcement of what diplomatic observers admitted as a master stroke by Adolf Hitler came even while British and French military officers were in Moscow going over plans of strategy with high Soviet officers.

It seemed likely that these discussions would lead to no constructive results.

The brief official announcement of the decision of Russia and Germany to conclude an agreement not to go to war stated that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop will arrive in Moscow Wednesday to conclude negotiations with Russia's foreign commissar, Viacheslav M. Molotov.

The brief announcement by the official German news agency a few minutes before midnight said: "The government of the Reich and the Soviet government have decided to conclude a nonaggression pact with each other."

Today's Best Story

Jaws of Fish Caught Two Years Ago Locked, He Loses 2 1-2 Pounds.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21.—(P)—This is a story of the fish that did not grow in the telling.

C. B. Powell and Jerry Cluever netted a four-pound pike in Gull lake, Minnesota. It was placed on a steel stringer, near the boat's motor. The propeller cut the stringer, but left the pike's jaws locked in a steel safety pin. It could open its mouth about two inches, no more.

That was two years ago. Last week, Mrs. H. J. Latimore, fishing in Gull lake, "had a peculiar strike; just a feel."

She reeled in a pike with a steel pin in its jaws. "It was just skin and bones" and weighed only about 11-2 pounds. She removed the rusty stringer and placed the fish back in the water.

Flood Prostrates Tientsin As Rivers Continue To Rise

British Concession Loses Water and Electric Power Supply.

TIENSIN, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Swirling waters rose rapidly in the Tientsin area tonight as this North China city of 1,300,000 population lay virtually prostrated under its worst flood disaster in history.

Overflow waters from the Hai river and other streams covered most of Tientsin and outlying areas. Official reports on the loss of lives and property were lacking but officials said casualties and damage would be heavy.

Japanese military authorities said the rains were the heaviest in 80 years.

Food Stores Flooded.

Natives fleeing their flooded homes had to take to boats and makeshift rafts. Some even had to swim with their meager belongings on their backs.

Most food stores, which normally carry only limited stocks, were flooded. Authorities said, however, that an acute food emergency had not yet arisen.

Health officials said the city's major task would come once the flood waters began to recede, leaving behind the bodies of humans and animals who drowned, increasing the menace of pestilence.

British Water Fails.

The British Concession was among the hardest hit areas. Its water supply failed today, adding to the misery caused by the loss of its electric power supply yesterday.

Many of the barriers, thrown up by the Japanese when they blocked the British and French concessions June 14, were washed away. However, water-soaked Japanese sentries remained at their posts and continued to search the few persons attempting to leave or enter the areas.

FRANCO ORDERS ARMY TO ORGANIZE QUICKLY

LISBON, Tuesday, Aug. 22.—(UP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch early today reported from Madrid that Generalissimo Francisco Franco has ordered rapid organization of his defense forces "in readiness for any emergency."

The instructions were said to have been given to the minister of war and aviation.

Nazi 'Super Guns' Rumble to Polish Border

16-Foot, 10-Inch Barrels Carried on 3 Trucks; Ambulances, Cars Jam Roads at Gleiwitz.

GLEIWITZ, Aug. 22.—(Tuesday)—Four of Germany's famous motorized "super guns" and an attendant ammunition train rolled through Gleiwitz at 2:50 a. m.

Each 16-foot, 10-inch caliber barrel was carried on three sets of trucks and the ground and firing mechanism on three other sets of trucks drawn before them.

From the direction of the railroad station the half-mile column approached and disappeared into the dark headed toward this city's military garrison. The Polish border lies within two miles of these barracks.

Amazed Observers.

Guns of this type amazed military observers at the parade for Admiral Horthy of Hungary in Berlin in the late summer of 1938 and again April 20, 1939, at the military parade for Adolf Hitler's birthday.

The outlines of high caliber shells under tarpaulin coverings in the ammunition section of the column were plainly visible to observers above the street level.

The group going through town this morning is the second artillery section to be seen here within the last week. The other, heavy mortars, took the same route at 3:45 p. m. yesterday.

This German community facing the Polish border bristled with military activity.

Trucks bearing equipment jammed highways and ambulances dashed about.

Emplacements Constructed.

Emplacements under construction for the past week on the Polish border near here were, as far as could be ascertained, finished yesterday.

Guns seen today were the first of any field type noted in a week's observation in the border region.

Many trucks carried square boxes covered with tar paper, there were some rolling field kitchens.

Besides the regular army ambulances, civilian and Red Cross units were observed. Most were en route to and from distribution quarters for medical supplies, newly established in garrison buildings on the highway half way between this city and Richter-dorf.

The highway has become almost exclusively an artery of military traffic, since it leads to the Gleiwitz garrison erected two years ago.

Similar replies were given the American embassies in Tokyo and Peking, and a memorandum on smaller nations to draw up a peace appeal to unhappy Europe.

It was generally agreed here that King Leopold's action was well meant.

It was seen that, as a result of the agreement with Russia, the King's conference faces a much more complicated assignment than was originally contemplated.

Peaceful Solution Possible. Best informed quarters in Berlin expressed the opinion that a conference of the smaller powers might bring about a peaceful solution to the Polish-German quarrel if their influences were devoted to an effort to make Poland more reconcilable.

But such a meeting can have no influence on the German attitude, it was stated.

Germany felt herself in a position strong enough to bring about her own solution.

"Poland's back has now been uncovered," one German observed. Berlin was still talking about "peace" and it seemed a final reckoning with Poland was more certain than ever on account of the Russian agreement.

There had been many indications that the present week might bring some decision, but now it has been concluded would be delayed a few days.

NEW TRAGEDY HITS EXILED CONDUCTOR Bruno Walter's Daughter Slain by Mate, Who Is Suicide.

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 21.—(UP)—Mrs. Margaret Nap-pach, 33, daughter of Bruno Walter, internationally famous orchestra leader, has been slain at Zurich by her husband, who then committed suicide, police disclosed reluctantly tonight.

The news leaked out when it was announced that Walter's friend, Arturo Toscanini, would conduct for him tonight at the international festival concert.

President Ignace Moscicki, in black coat and hat, is shown reviewing anti-tank artillery of the Polish army during a demonstration at Wilna. On August 15 the Poles marked the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Polish Legion by Marshal Pilsudski. Yesterday at Gleiwitz and other German towns facing the Polish border Nazi supply trains, men and guns, were being concentrated as the tension between the two countries grew.

Japanese Troops Told To Match Americans' Courtesy in Dealings

'Sincere Regret' Expressed Over Slapping of San Francisco Woman.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, announced today that Japanese authorities in the Tientsin area of China had given orders to their soldiers to accord courteous treatment to all American citizens as far as they assume a similarly courteous attitude.

The instructions, he said, were issued following protests by American representatives against the slapping of Mrs. Mary Frances Richard, of San Francisco, by a Japanese soldier at Tientsin with in accordance with the military regulations.

The Japanese consul general at Tientsin, Welles said, wrote a letter to the American consul there, David C. Berger, expressing "sincere regret" on behalf of the Japanese authorities.

The Japanese representative said there was some inconsistency between Mrs. Richard's statements and the findings of a Japanese official investigation, but that the Japanese sentry in question, who had never caused any trouble in his past, had been "duly dealt with in accordance with the military regulations."

Similar replies were given the American embassies in Tokyo and Peking, and a memorandum on smaller nations to draw up a peace appeal to unhappy Europe.

It was generally agreed here that King Leopold's action was well meant.

It was seen that, as a result of the agreement with Russia, the King's conference faces a much more complicated assignment than was originally contemplated.

REICH-SOVIET PACT ASTONISHES EUROPE

Poland for her true friendship to Germany.

Hungary Frightened. An anti-Bolshevik county whose beloved regent, Admiral Nicolas Horthy, smashed a Communist government to come to power, Hungary feared the effect of the combined Nazi doctrine and Communist creed on her society.

Rumanian cabinet members were up half the night. Their countrymen remembered they held Bessarabia, a territory secured from Russia after the World War, and held other territory desired by Hungary and Bulgaria.

Bulgaria hailed announcement of the pact. The nation has been divided between those favoring Germany and those favoring Russia. It was said they could now get together with the Nazis and Communists joining hands.

Yugoslavia, an anti-Bolshevik country, whose court harbors many white Russians, was stunned by the news. Pessimistic officials could see little room for Yugoslavia except to "knuckle under."

In Moscow diplomatic quarters were thunderstruck by reports of the accord with Germany, which was confirmed by Tass, official Soviet news agency. Diplomats foresaw an immediate explosion of the ten-day old military staff talks with Britain and France.

German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, who Tass stated was coming to Moscow "for the purpose of negotiations" on the treaty, will be the first high Nazi official ever to visit Moscow.

By agreeing to conclude a pact of nonaggression with Nazi Germany, Soviet Russia moved into a strategic position that may enable her to dictate the terms of a peace accord and Europe's balance of power. Tass stated that Germany and Russia had agreed to shelve their long and deep hatred "to relieve the tension of their political relations and to eliminate the menace of war."

In Tokyo, Germany's decision to enter into the pact with Russia was described in well-informed quarters as isolating Japan diplomatically and shattering any prospects of Japanese adherence to the Italo-German military alliance.

Japan, it was said in neutral quarters, is hard hit by the surprise developments because it weakens vastly the Italo-German-Japanese alliance against communism upon which Japan has depended for great support.

Italy Satisfied. Fascist Italy, meanwhile, cheered the German announcement and many Italians believe it means that Europe has been saved from war over the Danzig question.

Great Britain and France, it was contended, were depending upon Russia—her troops and her fighting planes—to strengthen the so-called anti-aggression "encirclement" of Germany and Italy. Now, with Russia about to pledge not to go to war against Germany, the Anglo-French "encirclement" has been defeated. One responsible Fascist quarter said, "Britain and France can be expected now to ease their warmongering and urging Poland on to her destruction. We can anticipate a peaceful settlement."

Would Destroy Balance. In Washington high administration officials and informed diplomats said the German government's announcement of intention to conclude a non-aggression pact with Russia would, if completed, destroy the world balance of power and greatly strengthen Germany, Italy and Japan, the major totalitarian powers.

It was indicated that consummation of such an agreement would spur President Roosevelt in his drive to force congressional revision of American neutrality legislation to permit "cash and carry" wartime trade with this country.

The State Department, caught completely by surprise by the sudden German-Russian move, declined to comment officially.

Italian Maneuvering. Informed British quarters in London contended early today that a non-aggression pact between Germany and Russia will not necessarily doom the projected "peace front" alliance embracing Britain, France and the Soviets.

Instead, they suggested, Josef V. Stalin appears to be maneuvering in every way to gain the most strategic and most favorable position possible for Russia.

Although last night's announcement left British officials shocked and bewildered for a time, some quarters professed to believe Moscow would not take the German pact seriously, because of deep distrust of the Nazi regime, and would use it as a bargaining club in the tri-power negotiations.

In France the announcement of the proposed Soviet-German treaty had a stunning effect. Official sources refused to comment. But there was private anger and astonishment among Frenchmen who feared Europe was drifting rapidly toward war because of German demands for Danzig's return. Premier Daladier called emergency cabinet meetings for today and Thursday.

NAZI, SOVIET ACTION IS SURPRISE TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(UP)—High administration officials and informed diplomats said tonight that the German government's announcement of intention to conclude a non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia would, if completed, destroy the world balance of power and greatly strengthen Germany, Italy and Japan, the major totalitarian powers.

It was indicated on high authority that consummation of such an agreement between two of the world's greatest military nations—although not tantamount to an alliance—probably would spur President Roosevelt on in his drive to force congressional revision of American neutrality legislation to permit "cash and carry" wartime trade with this country.

Caught by Surprise. The State Department, caught completely by surprise by the sudden German-Russian move, declined to comment officially pending receipt of formal advices from the Nazi and Soviet governments or from this country's embassies in Berlin and Moscow.

Some diplomatic quarters said such a pact would indirectly aid Germany immeasurably in forcing a quick settlement of the Danzig and Polish corridor disputes with Poland.

The latter's position, it was said, undoubtedly would be severely weakened at a time when the most serious European crisis since 1914 seems to be developing. Diplomats consulted by the United Press doubted that Russia, shortly after conclusion of nonaggression and trade treaties with the Reich, would force a showdown with Germany over issues which Chancellor Adolf Hitler considers "internal" problems.

Some Skeptical. Some quarters were skeptical, however, that a nonaggression treaty would actually be concluded. They believed that the German announcement might be intended to influence Poland's allies at the present crucial moment or that Russia might be resorting to "power politics" in an effort to force Great Britain and France to meet her demands for an outright military alliance.

It was considered important that the announcement came while Russia is engaging in general staff and defense conversations with the two great western European democracies. Thus far, Britain and France have declined to meet Moscow's demands for an alliance which would bind them to come to Russia's aid in event of attack on certain countries in strategic geographic positions with relation to the U. S. S. R.

MIAMI GIRL SLAYER REPORTED AS SANE Psychiatrist Says Alienist Will Reach Same Opinion.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 21.—(P)—Dr. T. Earl Moore, Miami psychiatrist, reported tonight his examination of Charles Jefferson, who had established that the confessed kidnaper-slayer was not legally insane.

Dr. Moore said Dr. Ralph Greene, Coral Gables alienist, who labored in a mental examination of the prisoner and then continued with an individual test.

"I believe there can be no doubt that Dr. Greene will arrive at the same conclusions that I have reached," said Dr. Moore.

He added that he planned an additional examination of Jefferson, who signed a confession and was indicted on charges of kidnapping, attacking and slaying Frances Dunn, 17, Miami high school girl, after promising her and Ejan Bolton movie careers.

PRESIDENT STUDIES WHITE HOUSE MAIL

WPA Projects Requiring Signature Reach Him on Return to Halifax.

ABOARD U. S. S. LANG, HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 21.—(P)—Completing two-thirds of his vacation cruise, President Roosevelt arrived here late today aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa to look into two White House mail bags carrying documents requiring his immediate attention.

WPA projects which had to have Mr. Roosevelt's approval before construction could start were among the more important matters.

The President arranged tentatively for the Tuscaloosa and her escort ship, the destroyer Lang, to sail southward on the last leg of the cruise before midnight.

A 345-mile run from Bird Rocks in the Gulf of St. Lawrence brought the President to this port for the second time in a week.

Approximately 1,000 miles of water lay ahead of the President on his swing back to the United States. He was expected to reach Annapolis no later than Friday, since Prince Consort Felipe, of Luxembourg, is to be a week-end guest at the White House.

SHUSHAN INDICTED FOR MAIL FRAUD IN $400,000 BOND FEE

Huey Long Leader Accused in Graft on Levees; Only Maestri Left Free Among Kingfish Chiefs.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 21.—(AP)—

Another prominent name was lopped from the shrinking list of unindicted Huey Long leaders today when a federal grand jury accused Abe Shushan of using the mails to defraud.

The 300-pound former wholesaler was indicted with four New Orleans business leaders on charges they split nearly $400,000 in fraudulent fees paid for re-financing of the New Orleans levee board.

This brought under federal indictment three of the four best-known lieutenants of the late Senator Long who took over Louisiana's political reins in 1935 when a bullet cut short the "Kingfish's" spectacular career.

Former Governor Richard Leche and Hotel Man Seymour Weiss already faced criminal charges, and Mayor Robert Maestri of New Orleans remained the only one of the "high command" left free to attempt salvage of the once mighty Long machine.

Accused with the 45-year-old Shushan, who was acquitted in 1935 on an income tax charge, were Attorney Herbert Waguen-spark, Financiers Robert J. Newman and Norvin T. Harris, and Accountant Henry J. Miller. The first four all made bond of $15,000 while Miller was freed under $5,000 bond.

Smith Indicted.

Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of scandal-ridden Louisiana State university, was indicted today on charges of income tax evasion of $9,252.90 in 1936.

Huey Long made Shushan president of the levee board in 1929, which place he held until October, 1935, when he resigned after his income tax trial.

The great $400,000 Shushan bribe, named in honor of Shushan, was named New Orleans bribe a fortnight ago when Shushan refused to come before the levee board to explain his part in the bond deal.

Government attorneys today made no effort to hide their disappointment at the death of Dr. J. A. Shaw, found dead last night, gun in hand, but expressed determination to go ahead. Shaw was to have been the principal witness against Leche and Weiss in charges they conspired to violate the Connally "hot oil" act.

TWO NATIONS ACT TO RESTORE AMITY

Nazi Reservoir for Raw Materials Seen in Move by Hitler.

By The Associated Press.

By deciding to conclude a non-aggression pact, Germany and Soviet Russia have undertaken to restore close relations which existed after the World War and until Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933.

By moving to enter a friendly agreement with the Soviet, Hitler is believed by some observers to have given weight to the advice of many German military leaders who always have advocated co-operation between Germany and Russia, which they look upon as Germany's natural reservoir for raw materials.

German-Russian friendship, as it affected more remote history, dates back to Bismarck, the "iron chancellor" of Germany, who favored Russia as a possible ally in European politics in order that Germany never might have to fight a war on two fronts.

"Re-insurance" Pact
He was planning to renew an old "re-insurance" pact with Czarist Russia when Emperor Wilhelm II dropped him as chancellor.

Russia then turned to France and Britain. Germany found herself opposed east and west when the World War came.

Following the World War, relations became close.

In very recent years, however, their relations have puzzled many observers. Officially and publicly the bitterest of peacetime enemies, the two countries nevertheless maintained prosperous mutual trade relations until 1935. In several other ways they belied the constant hammering at each other's political and social conceptions.

One of First Acts.

One of the first acts undertaken by Hitler after he became German chancellor was to renew Germany's non-aggression agreement with Russia. The original document was signed April 24, 1926, when Germany, with a sizable Communist representation in her government, was on friendly terms with Russia. Hitler's renewal took place May 5, 1933.

The treaty and its renewal were each to endure seven years.

Nazi attacks on Communism, however, and Hitler's avowed desire to incorporate Russia's Ukraine into the German Reich caused trade to dwindle.

Signs of Russian-German rapprochement came to light this year when Britain set out to build a front to oppose the Rome-Berlin axis.

It was announced trade negotiations were under way. Finally, on Sunday, it was announced a trade agreement had been concluded, providing a German credit of 200,000,000 marks (about $80,000,000) for Russian purchases in Germany.

Charles B. (Pat) Herb, State's Oldest Confederate Veteran, Dies at 105

He Came From Ireland 'To Do Some Fighting'; Home in Macon.

Charles B. (Pat) Herb, doughty Irish veteran, who came to America from Dublin at the start of the War Between the States "because there was some fighting to be done," and who joined the Confederate army because he happened to land at Savannah, died yesterday morning at Grady hospital. He was 105 years of age and reputed to be the oldest Confederate veteran in Georgia.

A joust or a joke were one and the same to "Pat," and he never tired of regaling his audiences at the Confederate Soldiers' Home, where he had lived since 1937, with reminiscences of his campaigns, principally the Battle of Chickamauga and the first and second engagements at Bull Run, were filled with the humor of his people.

The fiery lad from County Kildare, whose love of fighting led him to enlist in the 26th Georgia Infantry in 1861, never quite got over his animosity for the "damn Yankees," an animosity induced, possibly, by a sword wound in the head received from a Union officer at the Second Battle of Manassas.

For this reason "Pat" refused to go to the annual reunion of the "Blue and Grey" at Gettysburg, Pa., last fall.

"I'm afraid," he said at the time, with a twinkle in his eye, "that those Yankees will start bragging about how many 'Johnnie Rebs' they had shot, and I would be forced to crack their pates with my cane."

"Pat" came to America early in 1861 with a group of friends. With a twin brother, he stowed away on a ship sailing from Ireland.

He joined the 26th Georgia Infantry, then commanded by General Hampton Jackson Lowde, at the age of 27, signing up with the unit at Traders' Hill, now Folkston, Ga. After a year he was sent into the field.

During the early fighting in Virginia he was taken prisoner but was released in an exchange of captives, and returned to his regiment, with which he remained until the end of hostilities in 1865.

Soon after the war, "Pat" settled in Macon, where he lived until til he came to the Confederate Soldiers' Home in 1937.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Miss Adeline Lane Herb, and two sons, J. C. and J. F. Herb, all of Macon.

The body was sent to Macon yesterday afternoon for funeral services and burial.

rites for COLONEL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Funeral services will be held in Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow morning for Colonel Carl C. Jones, quartermaster corps, United States army, retired, who died Saturday at St. Petersburg, Fla. Burial will be in Arlington National cemetery.

RAILROADER FOUND SHOT ON HIS PORCH

H. P. Burnett, 48, in Critical Condition With Wound in Head.

H. P. Burnett, 48, of 1130 Hardee street, a switchman for the Georgia railroad, was in a critical condition at Grady hospital early last night, suffering from a shot wound in the head, which police reported was self-inflicted. Burnett, who is married and has three children, was found on the back porch of his home with a 16-gauge shotgun, according to police. A charge penetrated his jaw. Bits of shot were found in the ceiling of the porch. No reason was given for the shooting. Police said that only one son, Jack, 13, was at home at the time, his wife and two other children, H. P. Burnett Jr., 20, and John, 18, being absent. Police said they were informed that Burnett walked out on the porch at 4:30 o'clock with the shotgun in his hands. He placed the barrel of the gun to his chin and pulled the trigger. He was taken to Grady hospital by Robert Barrett, of 1106 Hardee street.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

WE PRESS ON.

Let me take this occasion to thank the friends who have written to express approval of my column some days ago with reference to the article in the Saturday evening Post by Will Durant on "The Crisis in Christianity." I am heartened by the reactions expressed in these letters from people in widely varying fields of thought. Whatever may be said by those who are critical of the Christian religion—and I am glad there is unrestrained opportunity for criticism—it is good to know that they touch upon the most vital fact in this world when they tackle Christian faith and service. Since that epochal day when the great apostle said, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," there has been a growing company of people in the world who "know in Whom they have believed," and they have steadily "followed in His train."

I was helped anew when I came again the other night upon this great poem by the late G. A. Studdert-Kennedy:

We shall build on!
On through the cynic's scolding,
On through the coward's warning,
On through the cheat's suborning.

Christ, though my hands be bleeding,
Fierce though my flesh be pleading,
Still let me see Thee leading,
Let me build on!

Till through death's cruel dealing,
Brain wrecked and reason reeling,
I hear Love's trumpet pealing,
And I press on!

Humbly we acknowledge our failures, but confidently we claim His blessed assurance that "those whom Thou gavest Me I have kept, and none of them is lost. All Mine are Thine and Thine are Mine, and I am glorified in them." The transforming power of the blood of Jesus Christ is our answer to the subtle challenge of Satan. "As He died to make men free, let us live to make men free, while God goes marching on!"

1ST DEFENDANT JAILED ON WAGE-HOUR COUNT
ELKINS, Va., Aug. 21.—(AP) Federal Judge William E. Baker today ordered a trouser manufacturer jailed for six months for failing to comply with the wage-hour law.

Government counsel said the defendant, Sanford Lerner, was the first to be sentenced to jail under the act administered by Elmer F. Andrews. Judge Baker's order stipulated that if at any time during the six months Lerner should make payments of $3,152.23 the government contended were due his employees, he would be released.

GEORGIAN KILLS SELF AFTER SHOOTING WIFE
HAWKINSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 21.—(AP) Pulaski County Sheriff Jim Hill said Ben T. Dorsey, 45, liquor store operator, shot and killed himself this morning after a futile attempt to kill his estranged wife.

The sheriff said Dorsey shot at his wife several times before he turned the pistol on himself and fired near the heart wice. Mrs. Dorsey was shot in her hand.

HUDSON TO SHOW THREE NEW LINES

1940 Cars With Newest Development of Construction, Usefulness Announced.

Three new lines of 1940 Hudson cars are soon to be announced.

A new entry is to be shown in the lowest price field, the Hudson Six, in which new features, new fabrics and new upholstery style are offered in addition to front-end suspension, riding comfort and other features.

Also spotlighted for 1940 is a wholly new type of low-priced straight eight.

This new Hudson eight, which delivers more than one horsepower for every inch of wheelbase, is further development of Hudson's high power-to-weight engineering practice and is said by engineers to attain new standards of performance and economy.

Companion car to this new Eight will be the Hudson Super-Six, which will be identical except in the power plant.

Aristocrats of the line are the new Country Club six and eight-cylinder sedans in which new interior luxury is introduced. In these models Hudson stylists have achieved new luxury by the use of massive deep-formed seats and an entirely new upholstery material especially selected and woven for Hudson by the Hockanum Woolen Mills, makers of fine custom fabrics. Airfoam seat cushions, introduced last year by Hudson, have been redesigned for greater comfort and smarter tailoring.

For the first time in the lowest price field independent front wheel suspension with center point steering is introduced. This is further improved by the incorporation of Hudson's recently patented auto-poise control, which, according to Hudson engineers, is an important basic contribution to the principle of independent suspension. This development will be found throughout the entire 1940 line.

BYRNE REVIEWS PLANS FOR SALES

Sales and merchandising plans of the Hudson Motor Car Company for 1939-40 were previewed yesterday by E. F. Byrne, eastern sales manager of the company, at a conference attended by more than 300 retailers, distributors and press representatives.

Three new lines of the latest model automobiles were inspected, including a Hudson Six which features new fabrics and a new style of upholstery in addition to engineering advances in performance, riding comfort and roadability.

Also exhibited were the new straight eight, which delivers more horsepower for every inch of wheelbase, and the Hudson super-six, together with the aristocrats of the line, the new Country Club six and eight-cylinder sedans. These feature interior luxury in massive, deep-formed seats and entirely new upholstery material.

All the new Hudsons have been restyled and the new characteristic front-end design has been maintained throughout the entire line.

PORTLAND PAPER STOPS PUBLISHING

Afternoon Publication Leaves Two Dailies in City.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 21.—(AP) The Portland News-Telegram announced it would suspend publication with today's editions because of "greatly increased costs of production" and "an ever-growing tax burden."

In a statement published in today's first edition, the afternoon paper announced: "In spite of the unceasing efforts of an able and loyal organization, this newspaper has encountered increasing difficulties, ranging from greatly increased costs of production to an ever-growing tax burden in the face of wretched conditions in the afternoon field, and the Oregonian alone on a sound basis are not possible."

The paper said the Oregon Journal had taken over features and had acquired the circulation list. The Telegram was founded in 1877. In 1931 it consolidated with the Daily News, established in 1906. The News-Telegram was a member of the Scripps league of newspapers.

About 150 editorial, circulation and other employees were on the News-Telegram's pay roll. The suspension left the Oregon Journal alone in the afternoon field, and the Oregonian alone in the morning field.

CAR VICTIM TAKES TURN FOR BETTER

Injured Decatur Youth Rallies Slightly.

Slight improvement in the condition of Jack McKinney, 20, of Decatur, who was critically injured when thrown from the fender of an automobile on Memorial drive Saturday, was reported yesterday afternoon by attaches at Georgia Baptist hospital. 6 ANGLERS DROWN OFF NEW HAMPSHIRE

Bodies Washed Ashore at Rye Beach After All-Day Party.

RYE BEACH, N. H., Aug. 21.—(AP) The sea cast up six bodies on the beach today, revealing the tragic end of an all-day fishing party.

The victims were identified as: Ralph Pryor, 55, of Dover, owner of the boat; Miss Ethelyn Cutler, 16, of Newmarket, a cousin of Pryor; Frank Plante, of New Boston, N. H.; Joseph Wajnar, 23, of Newmarket; Walter Hargrave, 24, of Newmarket; and Clarence P. Yeaton, 47, of Dover.

Identification was made by Pryor's son, Robert.

Dr. Frederick Gray, medical referee, said all were accidentally drowned.

The bodies were found on the beach by Richard Lock, of Lawrence, Mass., summer resident, and were taken to a Portsmouth undertaking parlor.

Coast guardsmen said they would be unable to determine the cause of the accident until the missing boat, the 25-foot cruiser Nodska, was found.

They theorized, however, that there was either an explosion which forced the party to leap into the sea, or that the boat capsized and sank, maybe after striking some rock or other obstruction.

Coast guard boats had begun a search for the Nodska and her party this morning when they first were reported missing.

He did not mention any names in the interview, but said "he probably" would take action soon after congress reconvenes.

ITU NOT SUSPENDED, AFL OFFICIAL SAYS

Type Union Warned Action May Be Taken Unless Assessment Is Paid.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Executive Secretary Frank Morrison said in a letter today the American Federation of Labor has not suspended the International Typographical Union, as reported last week end, but is considering so doing.

The letter was sent to Woodruff Randolph, secretary-treasurer of the ITU, in convention here. Previous reports said the ITU had been suspended because it had not provided an assessment demanded by the AFL.

Morrison's letter explained the executive council of the AFL adopted a resolution to the effect that if the ITU at its convention here fails to make provision for the one cent a month per member assessment the AFL may take action toward suspension.

The AFL claims the ITU has failed to pay approximately $16,000 in assessments. The ITU at two previous conventions and in one referendum of its membership has voted against paying the assessment, claiming the funds are to be used in fighting the CIO.

BIGGEST ATLANTA COMMUNITY FUND SEEN BY HARRIS

1939 General Chairman Predicts 'Glad Giving' When Citizens Hear of True Facts and Need.

Atlanta's 1939 Community Fund campaign is going to be one of the most successful on record, W. C. Harris, general chairman of the drive, predicted yesterday.

Commenting on the results of a survey which preceded the change in name from "Community Chest," he said that Atlantans would give and give gladly when a true picture of the existing situation is presented.

His statement follows: "The facts I learned while considering the advisability of changing the name to the Community Fund have been a real revelation to me. The simplest but most startling of these facts was that the magnificent agencies our citizens have been running so splendidly are not relief agencies—and that relief agencies are operated by local government out of tax money, not through the charitable institutions of the public."

"I'm like a lot of other Atlantans who have to work for a living, who are proud of Atlanta and who try to spare enough time to do their share when something affecting the good of the community comes up."

"I subscribed to the Community Fund, and last year I worked diligently for it. Several months ago I agreed to head this year's campaign appeal. I wanted to start early and I planned to give it everything I had."

"I hadn't understood a lot of things I'd seen and heard about the human welfare situation here. There were a lot of questions I couldn't answer to myself. I couldn't answer them to friends helping me work for the Fund. I asked to subscribe to the Fund."

"Nearly everybody I met was in the same frame of mind. But we all kept plugging along, doing the best we could, because we thought it was our duty as citizens. I realize now we were all perhaps going through the motions."

"No, with all these things cleared up by a few simple facts, I can hardly wait to get started. I have the answers now, and they're plain as day. Every thinking man and woman in Atlanta is going to know the facts and the answers before we get through."

"I predict that this campaign is going to be easy and that it's going to be fun—for the workers and for the givers. You don't have to beg or bulldoze or strongarm Atlanta people into the right thing when they know the truth. And we're going to talk nothing but the truth."

"Just watch how cheerfully Atlanta people do their full share when we ask them to help the Community Fund."

A judge and a prisoner in Fulton county yesterday "regretted" that the whipping post had been abolished.

J. L. Broadway faced Judge John S. McClelland in the criminal court of Fulton county to answer charges of beating his wife. Judge McClelland observed, "I see in the newspapers that the whipping post for wifebeaters is being advocated in some quarters. I am inclined to agree with them."

"I think you are right, your honor. I am willing to take a whipping," said Broadway. McClelland imposed a straight 12-month sentence.

New Fulton Camp Opened for 4-H Club Members

First Group of Farmer Boys and Girls Moves in at Chapman Springs for Week's Study, Play.

County Agent Sid Truitt stood near the front steps of Lasseter Hall at Chapman Springs yesterday, and welcomed each dusty school bus as it arrived, depositing its load of excited 4-H Club members.

Close by was G. C. Cunningham, of Valdosta, state 4-H leader, up for the opening, and swearing that it was the finest 4-H Club camp in the nation. Cunningham wishes Georgia had just two more camps like Chapman Springs, one in the mountains and the other on the coast.

In and out of Lasseter Hall, with its raftered dining room, its large stone fireplace, and modern kitchen was Mrs. Sid Truitt, supervising storage of eggs, vegetables, chickens and bacon the young campers brought with them. Well-Rounded Faculty.

All over the place were camp staff members, a dietitian, school teachers, and instructors from the extension division of the university system, herding the girls up the hill, past the volleyball court to their cabins; leading the boys down a laurel-planted slope to theirs, and explaining why there was no water in the swimming pool as yet.

To the right of the camp National Youth Administration project workers were putting up a large manual training shop, NYA labor built the camp and NYA will operate it for nine months of the year as a resident training center.

The three summer months it will serve as a recreation center for the approximately 1,800 4-H Club members in Fulton county, and for as many more club members in surrounding counties as can be accommodated.

Chapman Gives Land. Located on 40 acres of rolling, forested land below College Park, the camp is the result of three years' work by Truitt, D. B. Lasseter, state NYA administrator; John Chapman, who gave the land, a group of county commissioners, and others interested in seeing that farm youth obtains some of the advantages of city youth.

Several Atlanta and national corporations contributed generously, Truitt said. Lasseter Hall, the central building, will be used as a community meeting place and dining hall. Group singing was held last night as soon as the supper tables had been cleared.

Pool Opens Today. Placed around a hill are nine cabins, four for the girls and five for the boys. They will accommodate approximately 200 campers. In a hollow is the swimming pool to be opened to the campers today.

The campers arrive on Monday and stay through Friday. Next Monday another 200 will move in. Their days, beginning at 7:30 a. m. and ending with lights out at 9:30 p. m. are full ones. There are swimming and recreation periods, sports and useful instruction, all under the supervision of qualified persons.

A coroner's jury at Tavernier, Fla., yesterday placed the blame for the traffic deaths of Claude S. Hamilton, of 232 West College avenue, Decatur, and Miss Frances Kremer, of Miami, Fla., on a hazardous approach and a slippery bridge.

Dies To Ask Ex-Nazi Officials To Testify on Propaganda

Investigation To Turn Next To Evidence Purportedly Linking Band With Anti-Semitic Groups; Tampa University Head Tells of Free Textbook Offer From Germany.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Chairman Dies, Democrat, Texas, said tonight the house committee on un-American activities was endeavoring to obtain the appearance of several former officials of the German diplomatic and consular service to testify on the dissemination of Nazi propaganda in the United States.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the investigation would turn next to evidence purportedly linking the German-American Bund with the Fascistic and anti-Semitic organizations in this country. A witness who has been an official of several such organizations, it was said, will be on the stand tomorrow.

A brief committee session today produced testimony by John H. Sherman, president of Tampa (Fla.) University, that a German consul general had offered to supply the school with free textbooks on Germany, written in German.

The consul general was identified as Baron Edgar Freiherr Spiegel von und zu Peckelsheim, stationed at New Orleans.

Among the former German officials whose testimony the committee hopes to receive is one, Dies said, who was attached to the embassy here for several years and eventually took exception to the methods of the Hitler government, resigned and remained in this country. The others, from the consular service, likewise are now at odds with the Nazis.

Dies said he was very hopeful that at least one would consent to appear. They could be subpoenaed and their attendance required, he added, but he saw no purpose to be served by that course, since their testimony, unless given freely, would be of little value.

Through these witnesses, it is Dies' purpose to supplement previously received evidence of connections between the Berlin government and the German-American Bund.

Sherman testified that von Peckelsheim told him that the donation of books was "a practice they followed to encourage the study of German in American colleges." He quoted the German as saying, too, that books had been given to other American educational institutions.

Fact reports were issued for the period in response to more than 1,800 inquiries and complaints from the membership, making necessary investigations in a wide range of fraudulent activities.

Eight bulletins were issued in which the facts on 108 individuals and offerings were made available to the membership, affiliated bureaus in America and Canada and to the chambers of commerce in Georgia.

TIMES SUES NEWS IN CHATTANOOGA

Libel, Slander Laid to Rival Paper in $100,000 Action.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Charging libel and slander, the corporation publishing the Chattanooga Times filed suit in circuit court today for $100,000 damages from The Chattanooga News, Inc., publishers of an afternoon paper.

Adolph Shelby Ochs, general manager of the Times, said that "several weeks ago J. C. George Fort Milton, as head of the News company, declined comment on the charges.

RYAN FORTUNE HEIR DEAD OF GAS POISON

Millionaire, Ill of Diabetes, Found With Head in Fireplace Heater.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Clendenin J. Ryan, 56, a son of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, multimillionaire railway magnate, was found dead at his home off Fifth avenue today, a victim of illuminating gas poisoning.

Police said his head was inside a gas heater in the fireplace, with several jets wide open, when the body was discovered by a business agent.

The butler in the household suffered a heart attack when the discovery was made.

The business agent, Frank Merklin, and a handyman, Irving Daniel, were almost overcome by gas while lifting the body from the fireplace.

A son, Clendenin J. Ryan Jr., former secretary to Mayor LaGuardia and assistant to Sanitation Commissioner William F. Carey, survives. The victim, a retiring figure, seldom came to public attention.

Detective Arthur Damica said Ryan had been suffering from diabetes and had been under medical care for some time.

The home where he died—a separate residence from the Fifth avenue house of his estranged wife—contains many valuable art treasures.

BABSON SEES TRADE NEAR NORMAL AGAIN

Business Back to 1923-1929 Level, Economist Says 10 Years After Crash.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Aug. 21.—(UP)—Business is virtually back to normal, Economist Roger W. Babson said tonight.

"And if your friends say 'business is terrible,' they're suffering from a defeatist complex," he added in an interview on the eve of his departure for a two-month tour of the Far East.

Almost exactly 10 years after he predicted the stock market crash of 1929, the nationally-known statistician was most optimistic over both present and future business, employment and earnings.

Asserting that economic conditions are far better than last year and about on the 1923-1929 level, Babson said:

"Earnings of 80 per cent of 300 companies which represent a real cross-section of American industry, trade and transportation, were higher in the first six months of 1939 than in the same period of 1938."

"Security holders are finding bigger checks in their dividend envelopes this August than a year ago. The total dividends paid are 40 per cent greater for the first six months of 1939 than for the same period in 1938."

"Payrolls are 20 per cent greater than last year."

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Shows How Driving Jerk-Recorder Works

W. L. Robinson, left, assistant director of safety and traffic engineering of the American Automobile Association, Washington, explains the functioning of a jerk-recorder to Corporal W. J. Redfern, of the state highway patrol. A jerk-recorder is used to determine how quickly a new driver learns to operate his car smoothly.

Schoolboy Safety Patrol Program Expansion Urged by AAA Official

W. L. Robinson Praises Record of Georgia Youths and Teachers in Accident Prevention at Training Conference; Sessions Here To Continue Through Friday.

Expansion of Georgia's schoolboy safety patrol program was urged yesterday by W. L. Robinson, assistant director of the safety and traffic engineering department of the American Automobile Association, Washington, as he spoke at a safety training conference at the Georgia Evening college, 162 Luckie street.

Robinson had nothing but praise for Georgia's record in schoolboy patrol activities. He said only four children had been killed in the state this year while going to or from schools. In 1937 the toll was 103 and in 1938 it was 83.

The safety authority said he could not recall a single other state that has made such a sharp reduction in its to-and-from-school rate. He credited the schoolboy patrols and school teachers with responsibility for the reduction.

The training conference will continue through Friday. State troopers, chiefs of police, school teachers, and leaders of parent-teacher associations are attending. The conference is sponsored by the Department of Public Safety.

with Corporal W. J. Redfern, of the state patrol, as director. At least one state trooper from each congressional district is enrolled.

Atlanta's safety record also drew commendation from Robinson. He said the city was to be congratulated on having a safety-minded mayor.

The AAA official presented moving pictures as a part of his detailed instruction on the organization and operation of safety patrols. He said the patrols serve as character-building agencies and offer parents a feeling of security when they send their children off to school.

Robinson emphasized the necessity of standardization of operation in the schoolboy patrol program. He said only one-half of Georgia's schools now have patrols.

Mayor Hartsfield welcomed the safety workers to Atlanta and encouraged them to intensify their work. Corporal Redfern invited additional teachers and police officers throughout the state to attend the remainder of the conference.

INDEPENDENT STEEL UNION SCORES NLRB

Republic Workers Charge
Gross Abuse in Appeal to Federal Courts.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—(AP) The Central Council of Steel Plants, claiming to represent 50,000 of the 60,000 employees in the Ohio plants of Republic Steel Corporation, accused the National Labor Relations Board today of "gross abuse of discretion" and asked the United States circuit court of appeals to hear its claim before deciding the company's appeal from a labor board order.

In a brief filed by Attorney Frank T. Bow, of Canton, Ohio, the council contended the labor board refused to permit it to intervene in the hearing on unfair labor charges brought against the company by the CIO's steel workers' organizing committee.

Republic appealed to federal court in October, 1938, after the labor board ordered it to reinstate 5,000 workmen who took part in the "Lafayette" strikes of 1937. It was in the same order that the board also directed the independent employee group be dissolved.

A honey show will be held in Atlanta September 4-9 in an effort to acquaint people with the flavors of honey. Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts announced yesterday.

Sponsored by the Department of Agriculture, the show will be held in conjunction with the state-wide observance of Georgia Honey Week, proclaimed by Governor Rivers for September 4-9.

"We hope the public will become flavor conscious to the extent they can pick out the flavors they like," Roberts said.

The annual honey supply in this state is valued at $573,250; from beeswax, $60,000; queen bee sales, $57,000; package bee sales, $140,000.

There are 207,000 colonies of bees in Georgia valued at $1,553,000, he said.

AIR-CONDITIONING OF AUDITORIUM IS RECOMMENDED

City Manufacturers Also Urge Designation of Few One-Way Streets on Experimental Basis.

Resolutions urging air-conditioning the city auditorium and designation of a limited number of one-way streets on an experimental basis were adopted last night at the annual meeting of the Atlanta Manufacturers' & Distributors' Association.

Perryman Little, president, said that both resolutions would be presented to city council for consideration and that other civic groups would be asked to lend their support.

In the auditorium resolution, it was pointed out that Atlanta is becoming increasingly important as a convention center and that it would mean much to the city to have a meeting place of such a size which could be made completely comfortable at any time of year.

"Two or three" one-way streets were urged as a means of working out a solution to the traffic problem. It was suggested that the plan could be tried and then expanded if it proves successful. The efficiency of the police department was praised.

Perryman presided at the meeting and the principal speakers were W. R. Ulrich, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and S. I. Mendel, chairman of the board of directors of the association.

Session Is Placed Up to Legislature

Rivers Aide Believes He Wishes To Dodge the Responsibility of Call, Hence Sentiment Poll.

By The Associated Press. An approaching football season gave the cue last night for capitol comment on Georgia's uncertain legislative outlook.

"The Governor," observed one high official, "has tossed the ball to the legislature. Now they'll have to run with it awhile."

The ball, legislative observers agreed, appeared to be fiscal recommendations of the house economy committee. On the assembly's reaction to adoption of this finance plan hinges decision whether Governor Rivers will call an extra session.

Solution of the state's fiscal problem, proposed by the committee, involves pegging of certain allocated funds, tightening of existing tax collections, and repeal of state income tax exemptions on federal tax payments.

Placing Responsibility. Capitol officials, including at least one close personal friend of the chief executive, saw in the latter's latest legislative poll a maneuver to place entire responsibility for the session—and financing of state services—directly on the assembly.

"This friend, pleading anonymity, summed it up this way: 'He (Rivers) hopes to let them run with the ball—the economy report—until they can't drop it.'"

Delay in calling an extra session brought criticism from House Speaker Roy V. Harris, however. Harris said in Augusta: "The smart boys see that they cannot cram the sales tax down the throats of the legislature, so they are helibut and predetermined not to allow a session this fall."

Predicted Session. The speaker, who last Friday predicted the legislature would convene itself if the Governor did not summon it, said agitation against a session came from persons seeking to delay action on income tax exemptions until next spring.

"Then," said Harris, "it will be too late . . . to produce any money before March, 1941—mind you, 1941."

Harris also was critical of proposals that the Governor borrow $3,000,000 for payment of school teachers, starting in September. Calling the plan "foolish," Harris observed:

"We owe over $4,000,000 now. How would it help for the state to owe $8,000,000 next spring, instead of $4,000,000?"

(Under law, money borrowed for schools must be repaid from school revenues the same fiscal year. Observers speculated that the Governor might obtain bank financing and repay the money later, under authority of the stabilization fund law, by diverting state highway funds.)

Authority for Bonds. (The Governor also would have authority to float highway refunding bonds totaling $2,660,000 and divert this money—originally intended for matching federal road bonds—into schools. With school revenue already anticipated, this would be more than enough for seven-months' support of all Georgia's common schools, but would not affect the $4,000,000 in unpaid teachers' salaries earned in 1938-39.)

Harris charged the "smart boys" were maneuvering against an immediate session to set the stage for a sales tax drive in 1941.

"For then," he asserted, "the state will need so much money until the plan for financing advocated by the economy committee will not work and will not be able to remedy the situation for this year or next."

"Then, presto, the smart boys will have cunningly brought about a situation which appears on first blush to be the very thing, but which in fact, either forces a sales tax or chaos in the state of Georgia."

The Governor, in announcing Saturday a second poll of assembly sentiment, emphasized there was no difference of opinion between him and his legislative lieutenants—Speaker Harris and Senate President John B. Spivey. He insisted, however, he was unwilling to incur expense of an extra session—estimated at about $250,000—without assurance of agreement on remedial action. The legislators were asked specifically if they would support the principal key measures of the economy committee's recommendations.

Meanwhile, the Governor arranged to meet Wednesday with the State Board of Education to discuss possible borrowing to start state support of schools a month in advance of the customary time—October.

COMPROMISE SEEN ON ALABAMA STOCK

House Vote Scheduled Today on Proposed Law.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 21.—(P)—Alabama's proposed state stock law was reported to night in reliable quarters as headed toward "a partial compromise," with a definite vote scheduled tomorrow in the house of representatives.

While Governor Frank M. Dixon declined comment, administrationists reported to be planning amendments to a pending option bill, introduced by Representative C. E. Norman, Bullock county.

The proposed amendments would alter the bill to require: 1. All hogs, goats and sheep be kept behind fences throughout the state; 2. That counties wishing to continue an open range status for cattle would have to vote themselves from under the law through local referendum.

3. No livestock owner could claim damages for animals killed or injured on public highways.

Plan To Settle Milk Strike In N. Y. Adopted at Parley

Mayor LaGuardia Announces Formula Has Been Accepted After Conference With Interested Parties; Dairymen Beat 2 Troopers and 2 Truckmen Near Syracuse.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(Tuesday)—(P)—A plan to settle New York's week-old milk strike was adopted early today at a conference of interested parties with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

The mayor announced a formula had been accepted for a blended milk price of $2.15 a hundredweight (47 quarts) to farmers until October 1, unless the price to be set under the federal-state marketing agreement should be higher.

Union Struck Tuesday. The Dairy Farmers' Union struck last Tuesday, demanding a $2.35 blended price, compared with approximately $1.60 at present.

Milk used only for drinking purposes has been $2.25, but other types of milk, sold at a lower figure, reduced the average.

The resumption of a 50-year fight over the spread in price between the producer and consumer resulted in the city's 7,000,000 residents getting only about half their normal supply—2,000,000 quarts instead of the usual 4,000,000.

On the outskirts of Syracuse, 30 farmers beat two troopers and two truckmen, dumped 600 quarts of milk on the ground and fled. On several Ulster county farms, strikers spoiled milk with kerosene, a sheriff reported. Altogether, more than 30 strikers were arrested.

In New York city, milkmen were ordered to concentrate deliveries on homes with children.

RIVERS' BORROWING PLAN IS ASSAILED

all, but more than they actually needed."

Carmichael said since "the duty of financing the appropriation bill rests with the general assembly, not the Governor, therefore, the distribution of the money should rest with the legislature rather than with the Governor, as in the case of the stabilization law."

Repeal of the stabilization law, which permits the Governor to use in general fund emergencies, was recommended by the economy committee.

Three other primary recommendations were urged again by the economy committee. They were the gasoline tax pegging, income tax change and lopping the general fund budget $1,500,000 in line with recommendations.

Four Methods Listed. The report did not cover the $4,000,000 school obligation, nor what to do about reimbursing counties for revenue losses due to operation of homestead tax exemptions.

Speaking for himself on these two items, Carmichael submitted four methods of paying off, "in the order of their desirability," as follows:

"1. By the use of allocated funds already on hand, some prefer to call it diversion."
"2. By the Governor's exercising his borrowing power under the constitution, by which he could obtain $3,500,000."
"3. By the issue of bonds to be retired over a long period of years."
"4. By the levy of an emergency tax to automatically expire when the deficit is retired."

Two Men Freed Under $1,000 Bond In Theft of Corpse From Automobile

Employees of Negro Funeral Home Charged With Stealing Body of Auto Victim From Ambulance of Another Firm.

Two employees of a negro undertaking establishment were freed under bonds of $1,000 each yesterday awaiting a hearing in recorder's court this morning before Judge A. W. Callaway on charges of "disorderly conduct—larceny from an auto (dead body)," the case growing out of the theft of the corpse of a 30-year-old negro from the ambulance of another undertaking firm Saturday night.

Charged with stealing the body of the negro, who was run over by an outboard Stone Mountain trolley car Saturday night at Anneton avenue, DeKalb county, were David Perry, 25, and Joe Hudson, 54, employees of Hanley Company's Funeral Home. They admitted taking the body from an ambulance of Dunn Funeral Home, at Whiteford avenue and Boulevard, but said their action was impelled by a desire to get the man to Grady. A check of the hospital revealed the body had not been brought there.

Richard Lee Gaines and Willie Hines, Dunn Brothers employees, said they left their machine after it had run out of gas. They discovered the body missing when they returned. A check of negro funeral establishments revealed the body at the Hanley Company.

Owner of the property is the estate of William S. Cox, which has agreed to raise existing college buildings.

The deal was closed Saturday. Members of the civic committee working on the idea are Wallace Sifton, Early Morris, Mayor Harris and Fred Shaefer.

MEDICAL CARE HELD ANTIDOTE TO CRIME

of Pharmacy, President Roy Bird Cook, of the group, declared that medical men must be made to take cognizance of and put into use the discoveries of the registered pharmacists.

"The real worry of the pharmacists," he said, "is to bring about a sound understanding between pharmacy and medicine have a mutual field requiring mutual understanding. The Ruckelshaus Foundation has come to see the lack of practical training in medical schools in the use of drugs. Diagnosis is all important, but to what end if the practitioner does not know just what to use and how to use it?"

Improvement of teaching in medical schools on the applied side—the administration of drugs—or they will continue turning doctors out to practice who often do not know enough about drugs to resist the onslaughts of salesmen of inferior products, he said.

Uniformity Urged. Secretary H. C. Christensen, of Chicago, told the association that a uniformity of requirements must be set up by all the state boards of pharmacy to protect the people from inexperienced men handling the medicines of life. He said that if uniformity was not maintained then states would begin refusing reciprocity of practice to pharmacists.

The first general session of the Pharmaceutical Association will be held at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Biltmore at which time President J. Leon Lascoff will deliver his presidential address and Governor Rivers will speak on "Public Health."

Sectional meetings will continue this morning and this afternoon.

Satisfying Dish For Spaghetti Appetites

By SALLY SAVER.

Every now and then, no matter what the season, one just gets an appetite for spaghetti. And while there is nothing better than Italian spaghetti or American spaghetti, for something new I am offering "Spaghetti Oriental" today.

In the sauce tomatoes, green peppers and celery are used, while the meat is wrapped in bacon slices. It's all very nice and I'm sure you will like it. Here's how it is made:

Spaghetti Oriental.
1 package spaghetti
2 tablespoons butter
2 onions, minced
2 green peppers, minced
1-2 cup celery, diced
3 cups tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
1-2 pound ground round steak, well seasoned
3 slices bacon
Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water and drain. Melt butter, stir in onions, green pepper and celery and cook 5 minutes. Add tomatoes and seasonings and cook half an hour, until sauce is thickened. Form seasoned steak into six patties, wrap half a slice of bacon around each patty, fasten with a toothpick and fry on both sides until well browned. Arrange spaghetti on hot platter, pour sauce around it and garnish with meat patties and sliced green peppers.

A good dish, too, is "Spaghetti, Southern Style" and maybe you'd like to try it sometimes. Here is the recipe:

Spaghetti Southern Style.
1 package spaghetti
1 pound veal cutlet
1 onion, chopped
2 tablespoons butter, margarine or bacon fat
1 cup tomato paste
1/2 cups boiling water
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water and drain. Cut veal in small cubes; brown with onion in hot fat. Add tomato paste, boiling water, sugar, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling point and simmer for about 20 minutes. Put layer of spaghetti in greased baking dish, add layer of meat and tomato mixture, then another layer of spaghetti and continue alternating layers until all ingredients are used. Bake in moderate oven about 20 minutes.

Woman's Quiz

Q. Please give directions for cooking low-cost beefsteaks such as those cut from chuck, rump, round, and flank.

A. Brown the steak in a small amount of fat, then cook slowly in a closely-covered pan with a small amount of liquid, either on top of the stove or in a casserole dish. Before cooking, the meat should be scored or pounded to make it more tender. Onions, tomatoes and other seasonings add flavor.

Q. Is there anything I can use to prevent the surface from wearing off of my new printed linoleum?

A. Use a coat of spar varnish or liquid bakelite. As these tend to darken the floor covering, many persons prefer to use clear linoleum varnish, which dries more quickly but also wears off more

Have you a household problem to solve? Write clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to The Woman's Editor of The Constitution, 1013 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. for a reply. Boy Who's Lost His Chivalry Is No Good to Girl Friend

By Caroline Chatfield.

Ben writes: "Miss Chatfield, I'm a poor boy, have no car and my girl lives across the city from me. By the time I go home, have dinner and get over to her place the evening is half over. Lately I've been phoning her to meet me up town at the movie and sometimes she will, again she won't. Plainly she doesn't like it. She seems to think it compromises her to meet a date half way. I would appreciate a discussion of this subject and believe many young people would enjoy it as I have heard several young men say they were handicapped with the girl by being in a similar fix."

"It ain't what you do but the way you do it," that counts to a great extent in social life and I would say that under such circumstances a boy should put his cards on the table, explain his financial status to his girl friend and tell her that he wouldn't ask her to meet him half way if he had the coin to buy the car to cover the ground to get her there and get her back by bed time. She will appreciate the confidence and she won't feel compromised when she understands that he's not low-rating her. But in addition to this he should think up ways and means of showing her small courtesies that cost money. There are plenty of them.

All of which leaves the girl with some fine distinctions to be made and observed. A young man is easily separated from his chivalry and he's no good to a girl friend after he's lost his chivalry. So it's her job to meet him half way without letting him take her for granted, her job to make him feel that she's doing him a favor which may be withdrawn the moment it isn't recognized as a favor. When he gets the idea that he can whistle and have her come, he'll never move out of his tracks again. He will stand still and whistle.

Summing up, it comes to this: boys think better of themselves and of their girl friends when they (the boys) can come and get them (the girls), foot the bills for the evening's entertainment and deposit the girls on their doorsteps when the evening is over. Girls think better of themselves and of their boy friends when according to custom and tradition they can say to the boy friends, "Come and get me, take me out and bring me home." But when in the course of human events the lads haven't the coin to buy the car to make the trips, then it's time for the compromises.

However, it should be said that you can hardly pick up any magazine, newspaper or book without reading that men are more many when they are paying the bills and husbands more satisfied with themselves and more satisfactory to their wives when they are heads of their homes, financially speaking. Hence that old one about the crowing hen that always comes to some bad end. The roosters can't take it. They prefer to do the crowing.

Lovely Wedding Can Be Formal Or Informal

"What shall I wear on my wedding day?" is the bride-to-be's first problem. For on the answer depends the formality or informality of the wedding—and much of its cost.

When the bride decides to marry in a stately bridal gown with long billowy veil—then her wedding will be formal. If it takes place in the afternoon, the groom wears a cutaway, striped trousers. If in the evening, full evening dress, tails and white tie, is correct.

Formality is the keynote, too, if the bride wears a stunning afternoon dress, a "dresy" hat—a particularly appropriate costume for second weddings, when veils and all-white are incorrect. Cut-away and striped trousers are proper for the groom.

When does a wedding become informal? If, at an evening ceremony, the bride wears a simple white dress, a short veil—or if she wears a dinner dress with a hat or pretty headress. Then the groom may wear a dinner coat. And there is the daytime ceremony, at which the bride wears a smart suit, a small hat—the groom a dark business suit.

Both formal and informal weddings are charming if details, etiquette are in key. At a formal wedding the bride may have as many attendants as she likes, a lavish reception afterward. At informal weddings, there is but one bridesmaid, the reception may be very simple with refreshments of cake and punch.

Should there be a reception at home weddings? What are the attendants' duties? Our 40-page booklet, HOW TO PLAN YOUR WEDDING, gives complete information on every detail for formal and informal weddings—invitations, music, flowers, menus, budgeting, etiquette, what to wear. A guide for guests, too.

Defensive Raise Depends Upon Ruffing Power

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Startling as it may seem and as paradoxical as it sounds, normal trump support—Q x x or x x x x—is not required to raise partner's defensive suit overalls in the Culbertson or any other modern bidding system.

But, do not run to telephone your favorite partner yet, because this has always been so. Probably you just overlooked the fact that defending partner is the only player at the bridge table who would ever dare raise a one-suit bid, lacking normal trump support.

DEFENSIVE REQUIREMENTS. The iron-clad rule, never to raise without Q x x or x x x x in partner's trumps, still holds good for every position except raiser of a defensive suit overall. In this one situation, trump expectancy is reduced to A x . . . K x . . . Q x . . . or x x x . . .

The reason? It is just as simple as it is logical. Partner bids defensively on an approximation of 11-12 honor tricks and four playing tricks minimum at the one level. The odds, therefore, are better than ten to one that he is bidding a five-card suit or an unusually strong four-card holding. It would be difficult for him, holding a minimum hand, to scrape up four tricks without a long or strong suit.

With a stronger hand, defensive bidder most likely would double for a takeout to indicate the added strength. But even with this added leeway in trump requirements, defensive fourth hand should always bear in mind, holding an average hand, to raise cautiously and buy the bid as cheaply as possible.

It should always be remembered that defending bidder has already taken the liberty to borrow in advance on your unknown resources to the extent of three tricks, not vulnerable; two tricks, vulnerable.

INDEPENDENT VALUES. And what is the estimated, independent trick-taking value of defending partner's trump holding? That depends on the quality and quantity of trumps held.

You count nothing for three worthless trumps, one-half trick for four, one winner if you hold five, and two winners holding six long in partner's suit. A trump King or Queen-Jack picks up the added value of one full winner; the trump Queen or Jack—ten one-half trick additional. For example:

Trumps	Value
J x x	0
J 10 x	1/2
Q x x x	1 1/2
J x x x	2
K x x x x	2 1/2

COUNT RUFFERS NEXT. Ruffing power is usually the determining factor in defensive suit raises. Are you sure you know how to count ruffers for defensive raises?

Rhythm Tends To Develop Grace

By Ida Jean Kain.

Thousands of women stood around with their mouths open while the Sofia Girls, of Sweden, demonstrated exercises that looked like dancing. Their grace and beauty of movement were a revelation to the American woman who takes up exercise as a last resort—usually when she wakes up to the fact that she has lost her figure!

As a matter of fact, this particular brand of Swedish gymnastics makes use of the principle of relaxed rhythm which makes good dancing such a joy to behold. Instead of stiff, army drill movements, the exercises seemed to flow from one position to another, and the whole performance was extremely graceful.

Mrs. Maja Carlquist, instructor of the troupe, is convinced that sense of rhythm lies latent in everyone. But we lose it, she says, through the unnatural lives we lead and it must be reawakened through rhythmic exercises. In that way, we do not only tend to develop grace and rhythm in all our bodily movements, but also to get more out of our exercise.

The Sofia Girls started their exercise at the age of seven, when they started their schooling. Mrs. Carlquist thinks there must be something wrong with American women from girlhood, "because they have such big stomachs!" She believes that we eat far too much and exercise far too little. Looking at the average woman past 40, I think we'll have to agree that this is the correct diagnosis of our figure troubles.

Rhythmical exercises are not new in this country, but they are usually stressed for their value in inducing relaxation. Probably the alleviation of tension should be the main object for many of us. Whatever your reason for exercising, try to get as much rhythm as possible in these simple exercises borrowed from the lovely young Sofia Girls.

1. Hold the arms straight out at the sides, shoulder-level, but do not have them stiff. Now, skip sideways in long, bounding steps. You may have to skip in a circle, but that's all right. The main thing is to keep it up for two to three minutes without breaking the pace.

3. Skip in the opposite direction and bend to the right, with the right arm and leg outstretched, left arm arched overhead. 4. With no interruption of the flow of movement, bend the left knee and rest the weight on the left foot. Stretch the right leg straight out at the side, the outstretched right arm following the line of the leg. Arch the left arm overhead. Change sides, repeating the right arm arched overhead, the left leg stretched out at the side.

The leaflet, "Streamline the Midsection," contains exercises that lend themselves to rhythmic performance. It is available by mail to you upon receipt of a stamped return envelope. Send requests to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Unpretentious Style Is That Of the Swiss

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

You might think, to hear so much about the Renaissance in France and Spain, that little was going on in the lesser known countries at this time. But actually not only were the same creative forces at work but each section was developing its own individuality of design. The difference was simply that certain countries beyond their own borders than others.

Take Switzerland, for instance—where lived a race of wood carvers and cabinet makers who evolved their own styles but did not for some reason have much influence on the decorative speaking, in other lands for many centuries. Gothic forms prevailed here much longer than in most other European countries, and there was at the same time another trend—Italy. The Gothic forms expressed within Gothic bounds. The nearness of Italy also had its influence on the furniture of Switzerland. All this never seemed to be very well integrated into a national character until the world of recent years discovered the Tyrol.

And then quite suddenly we realized that the wood-working Swiss, plodding along in the same way through the centuries, had developed a charming rather fussy but wholly unpretentious style of their own that has had a great influence on the world of design. It was a passing glance to the Tyrolean themes that have been coming through these past seasons, if you will examine the character of the Swiss chalet, you can see clearly the rather peasant-Gothic character of the lines, interpreted in a downright provincial vernacular. And the traditional Swiss furniture still retains the mood it acquired when it was evolved during the Renaissance. . . . perhaps Switzerland is the only country where you will find still in the back country the same general spirit of design as it developed in the Renaissance. In other lands, this was a period of importance that had its influence and was

My Day: A Few Words About Self-Help

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK—I have just been sent a report which grew out of an investigation made in the state of Tennessee. Some of the ideas seem to be applicable everywhere in the country. I am going to give you a few of the thoughts which struck me most:

"So, to get around to the bug that's 'eating on me,' and has been since the first week of the review, it seems to me that the WPA should have in its budget somewhere a fund to care itself and that this fund should provide a staff of experts—economists, agriculturists, economists and engineers—whose business it would be to examine all of the economic possibilities of each working area. If they should decide that a community is as hopelessly inadequate to the needs of its population as I am afraid this country is, the government ought to buy it up and plant it in forests.

"If, on the other hand, they found some ways and means for a population to remain in its habitat, the information should be put in the hands of the chamber of commerce, or individuals who can afford to develop the resources. . . . I would like, also, to see a group of trained psychologists and doctors do a more thorough review of WPA workers to determine the number of unemployables."

"A lot of erroneous ideas have sprung up concerning the type of men on WPA. As a matter of fact, they are not much different from any other block of human beings except in the matter of education and training. They did not seem to be alarmingly prolific, nor stupid, nor lazy and untrustworthy. I think their moral integrity, upon the whole, would compare favorably with that of any other group."

The reason this interested me so much lies in the fact that in some communities the self-help co-operatives have accomplished wonders. I saw something attributed to a congressman (I will not name him for fear of making a mistake) in which he criticized certain government communities for giving people too much and felt that they had lost the power of working out their own difficulties as a result.

He had evidently not followed the origins of these communities he was visiting and he did not know that people he was visiting today were far better able to cope with any situation than they were five years ago. What he was grieving about was the result of conditions from '30 to '34 and not from '34 to '39.

There is still insecurity and many mistakes have been made, but he should have seen the people in the homes they left and, in addition, he should see people in similar circumstances today who have not been moved. He will find them even more insecure. Where, however, people can make a new start in their own communities with government help and self-help co-operatives, I think we have a much easier situation to work out.

No Pictures for Two Years, Star Still Pays Press Agent

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 21.—Brian, Aherne, who married Joan Fontaine Sunday was at one time so much in love with her sister, Olivia De Havilland, that he used to fly over her location site—for "Robin Hood"—and drop orchids for her. Olivia was all set to marry Brian—and then she met Howard Hughes. At about the same time, Joan met Conrad Nagel, whom, if you remember, she gave up because he was a trifle too old for her—20 years, to be exact. Alex Steinert followed Conrad in Joan's actions—she was very much older than Joan. It was Steinert who reintroduced 22-year-old Joan to 37-year-old Aherne a few weeks ago—they had not seen each other since his courtship of Olivia. "We have agreed on a permanent marriage," the imminent Mrs. Aherne told me blithely. Pressed for further details, Joan explained—"It will not be a Hollywood marriage." . . . Time will tell.

Write down "The Wizard of Oz" as the most fascinating film since—and including—"Snow White." Janet Gaynor—or rather Mr. Gilbert Adrian—has not made a picture for two years, but she still pays $500 weekly to her press agent. . . . By the way, Janet and her dressmaker-bridegroom own three houses between them—Adrian has a mansion in the valley, Janet a home in Beverly Hills and another at the beach. This housing problem always occurs when big shot movies big shot in Hollywood, and one of the couple—usually the woman, sells her home for a loss. Recent ones include Carole Lombard and Hedy Lamarr.

William Powell has gained two pounds while making his "Thin Man" picture! This movie finished a week ahead of schedule—and is now back on the set for re-takes. . . . Elsa Lanchester has asked for a role with Carole Lombard in "Vigil in the Night."

"I'm bored doing nothing," explains Miss Lanchester, whose husband, Charles Laughton, is also bored—but for a different reason. Mr. Laughton likes to be the boss of his pictures. So does William Dieterle, currently directing him in "Hunchback of Notre Dame." I have a hunch—no pun intended—that, before this epic is over, one of them will not be in the movie. . . . Elton Massey, the cameraman of "Balalaika" has a hard time finding a suitable angle from which to photograph her. Ilona has overdone her diet, and finds it hard to eat—even when hungry. When will movie stars realize that good health is the most precious possession there is?

George Raft cables that he has been invited to call on the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. The last time George was invited to see the Duke it was to teach him to then superceded by something else.

Of particular interest in the Swiss decorative picture is the chest or coffee table. Being noted for the quality of their wood work, it is natural that the Swiss should have had such a high regard for the carved wooden chest. First simply a box with a hinged lid, it became later a chest on legs, then it acquired a trestle base and gradually branched into the chest-lowboy version and later the high-boy style.

These chests were used for treasures, for linens, for spices, for all possessions to be cherished. For centuries the chest was essentially the only furniture in the house and there, as in other countries, it served all purposes, not only to keep things in but it could be used as a table, as a seat and even as a bed.

Being Vaccinated Is Individual's Concern

By Dr. William Brady.

National, provincial and local health department officers frequently issue bulletins or pleas urging people to be vaccinated against smallpox. The health authorities remind us that universal vaccination is the most dependable preventive measure against that fatal or mutilating disease.

With the latter assertion I agree. I like to feel that I, and every one who depends on my judgment or advice, shall keep well vaccinated, and so secure against the hazard of smallpox as one can be. But I condemn an abuse of power and the very acme of ignorance and intolerance any and every scheme whereby grafting politicians, medical or otherwise, attempt to force vaccination against his will—that is, any one of sound mind. There is absolutely no justification for compulsory vaccination of sane civilians in any circumstance. It is my opinion that graft, in the form of cash, political patronage or other advantage, is behind every trick by which politicians contrive to persecute some of the poorer or more helpless people in the community, for example by that wretched squeeze play whereby one ordinance imposes a penalty on parents who fail to send children to school regularly and another permits the school board to exclude from school children who have not been vaccinated.

It is the contention and belief of all medical and health authorities that persons who are successfully vaccinated are practically immune to smallpox and cannot take the disease even though they may be exposed. Very well, then, if that is so it is clearly sufficient to advise or recommend vaccination to the public, just as we advise and recommend diphtheria, antitoxin or typhoid-paratyphoid immunization. But it is illogical to insist that everybody be vaccinated. If an individual prefers to take his chances unvaccinated, that is purely his concern. If he does get smallpox it is unfortunate, but it doesn't impair the health of the rest of us who are vaccinated, if we are right in our belief in the efficacy of vaccination.

But common sense and logic seem to be at a low level in the medical mind of the day. The strange attitude toward the patenting of medicines is an instance in point. For many years the Code of Medical Ethics as written and promulgated by the American Medical Association has had a specific clause branding as unprofessional the trick of receiving money in return for patent on medicine or instrument. But, dear me, that was what the old docs of the horse and buggy era regarded as medical ethics. Today organized medicine, under the dictatorship of the ubiquitous Frodo-Baggins of the American Medical Association, actually defends patents on medicines, etc., on the questionable ground that a portion of the royalties accruing from such monopoly may be used to "control the quality" of the medicine and to "protect the public against contaminated or inefficient preparations."

Organized medicine is funny that way!

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brooke and Son Relate Experiences Enjoyed Abroad

By Sally Forth.

WITH the approach of the autumn season, many prominent Atlantans are returning to their native haunts from foreign shores. A glorious vacation was enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brooke and their son, Dick, who arrived here Saturday from their return voyage aboard the steamer Aquatania.

The trio, who sailed from New York several weeks ago aboard the steamship Franconia, toured Sweden, Norway, Russia, Denmark, England and Germany. So interesting were their experiences that Sally was inspired to recount a few high lights to her readers.

On the voyage across, the Brookes were delighted by the inimitable melodies of Ruby Newman and his orchestra, who attained fame during their long-term engagement at the Rainbow room in New York. Mrs. Lindsey Hopkins and Sims Bray, of this city, were among fellow passengers aboard the majestic steamer.

In answer to Sally's query concerning the country she liked best, Mrs. Brooke confessed that she was enchanted by the beautiful fjords in Norway. Stockholm, Sweden, young Dick's choice, is also ranked among her favorites. Here the trio viewed the famous Drottningholm palace, after which they journeyed to Visby and took snapshots of the historic cathedral ruins there.

A high light of their sojourn in Russia was a visit to Poushkin, where tragic Catherine the Great reigned in Leningrad. Near by they saw the palace of Peter the Great. In Moscow, the Atlantans viewed the Kremlin, pretentious government building, and the historic Cathedral of St. Basil.

Dick, who enters the junior class at North Fulton High school this fall, will delight his friends with his collection of snapshots taken abroad. Included in his photographic array of English scenes is Westminster Abbey, Windsor Castle, the House of Parliament and Hampton Court, where Henry VIII lived. Sally particularly liked the snapshot taken in Danzig, which presents Mrs. Brooke enjoying a congenial chat with a German officer and a Polish officer.

LITTLE KATHERINE MILLER, eight-year-old daughter of the Lawton Millers, is much perplexed by modern slang terms. Recently the little girl overheard her popular sub-deb sister, Daisy, mention that a young man of her acquaintance was "escorting" a blind date to a forthcoming party. Katherine made no comment, but later she approached her father, her youthful brow creased with pity.

"Daddy," she confided, "a friend of Daisy's is taking a blind date to a party. Isn't it sad that the poor girl can't see?" Whereupon Mr. Miller explained that a "blind date" is an engagement between two people who have never met.

Fired with indignation, Katherine burst forth: "I just don't understand the way people talk! They say a girl is dumb, and she can speak, and they say she is blind, and she can see!"

Sally is inclined to think that the future belle "has something there!"

ROSES are for romance and when Theresa Hamby's engagement to Tom Strickland Jr. was announced Sunday, the groom-elect chose these beautiful blossoms in his message to "say it with flowers." Tom, you know, now lives in Akron, Ohio, and the distance made it impossible for him to be in Atlanta for the formal announcement. But roses, always dependable in the language of love and romance, were delivered to the bride-elect early Sunday morning as a token of the auspicious date in the lives of the affianced pair.

ACCORDING to tradition, Teresa Atkinson will be the next among the former Emily Magids' bridesmaids to wed. Emily, you know, became the bride of Captain William Willis, U. S. M. C., Saturday evening at St. Luke's Episcopal church, after which her parents, the Louis B. Magids, entertained at a reception at their Ansley Park residence. Here the radiant bride tossed her bouquet among her attendants in the traditional bridal fashion. The bouquet was caught by Teresa, who "doubled-checked" her future when she cut the ring in the wedding cake shortly after.

Eula Lee McDowell, of Augusta, found a miniature skillet in her slice of cake, bearing a card significantly inscribed, "The way to a man's heart..."

John M. Smith cut the key to happiness, while pretty Mrs. Charles Goldwell, the former Rightman Magid, cut a baby-faced doll, bearing a card reading, "Your face is your fortune!"

Martha Davis, of Columbus, enjoyed an odd experience as she stood outside the church after the ceremony. A handsome young man, appearing quite distraught, approached her, and remarked, "Nobody knows what this wedding means to me!"

Touched, Martha raised her hand to pat his shoulder, planning to remind him that there were other lovely girls in the world, and not to worry because Emily was married.

She was stopped in time, however, when the young man explained, "You see, I got her job!"

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 21.—(P)—Cotton futures, sensitive to disquieting foreign news, dropped 1 to 5 points today.

Support was limited most of the day, although a little late buying carried the list out of extreme low territory. Foreign selling came mostly from Bombay following a decline in the Indian market which widened price differences with New York.

Hedge pressure reflected better weather throughout the southern cotton belt and consequent heavier movement of lint to market. Cancellation of recent heavy rains in Alabama was considered encouraging.

CRIME TEARS ON

Craig Asks Yvette To Be Understanding Friend to His Wealthy Uncle

By CAROLYN WELLS.

SYNOPSIS. At a cocktail party in Amy Crosby's home in Manhattan, Craig Madison introduces himself to Yvette Verne, a new movie star, after he overheard her quarreling violently with Billy Gomez, a man unknown to him. The actress soon came down; and when Craig invites her to spend the week end at the estate of his Uncle Harley Madison, in New Plymouth, Long Island, she becomes interested. She tells Craig she has heard of his uncle, who is regarded as an eccentric philanthropist. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

"I doubt it. Uncle doesn't want money, nor advice, nor assistance. But he does want sympathy. So if you could be his understanding little friend it might give him a bit of real pleasure, and it would constitute your good act for the day."

"Of course I'll do anything I can, but I'm staying only a day or two, and you can't establish sympathetic relations in a few minutes."

"I suppose not. Don't let it bother you. See that chap who just came in?"

"The one with the grave, studious face? Yes, I know, he's Fleming Stone. How I'd love to meet him!"

"Seems to me that for a film queen, who is chased round by cameramen and polite, deferential autograph-hunters, you are unduly interested in making new acquaintances. But Stone is a worth-while friend to meet, because he always remembers you, and that means if you ever need him he'll be at your service."

"At my service! I thought he was a detective!"

"He is. But isn't it among the possibilities that you may some day need the services of a detective?"

"Possibly, but not probably. We can't catch Mr. Stone now, though; see, he's going away. You must introduce him to me some other time. And I must go now. Are you staying in town?"

"What for? We consider Manhattan a suburb of New Plymouth. Shall I tell you how to reach us on but not a fit place to live in. Friday?"

"Not necessary. I have a chauffeur of pure gold. I just say New Plymouth, and he flies to it like a homing pigeon. Thank you ever so very lots for my invitation. I look forward to my visit with keenest joy. May I advise uncle about his improvements? I'm by way of being a bit of a landscape gardener."

"Don't plan. Wait until you see uncle, and then use your judgment as to what you shall say to him. But why is your interest all for him? My cousin Tom Sheldon and Ames, the secretary chap, are both worthy of your look-see."

"They'll get it. Come with me to say good-bye to Amy."

And Amy responded, gaily, "So nice of you to come, Craig. Come again, soon. Good-bye, Yvette—I rather fancy you're up to your old tricks! What a girl it is, to be sure. Come in again, both of you. Good-bye."

And then Craig Madison put his new friend in her car, and went away with his mind and heart full of her allure—the deep, deep walls of her violet eyes and the glints of hed gold in her brown hair.

Just why the Madison house was called Silver Hill nobody knew for certain. It is said that an early ancestor had owned a silver mine, but even that wouldn't account for the Hill part, for though the house was on a great slope of woods and grassland, no imagination could call it a hill.

The house itself was old and colonial, but it had been added to, so often and so culpably, that the colonial parts were difficult to discover.

The present Madisons liked it, for the atmosphere was cozy and comfortable, and there were so many rooms that everybody could have as many as he wished.

Harley Madison, autocratic by nature and plutocratic by circumstances, ruled with an iron hand in a velvet glove. He seldom had reason to remove his gloves in the home, but in the village he often went barehanded.

A well set up man of 45, he was heavy, but not fat, hale and hearty of appearance, with graying hair and merry blue eyes.

He was not fond of responsibility, though his doings of late years had piled them high on his shoulders. When his wife died 10 years ago he felt lonely and helpless. His sister, Cornelia kept house for him. As the years passed, Cornelia became more and more efficient in the household, and at last began to help Harley with his business affairs, and was soon accomplishing as much of the work as he did himself. Harley wanted to get through with all business and be a landowner and a gentleman of leisure. But somehow, suddenly, he conceived a plan of rejuvenating the old and shabby village, and decided to put a lot of his money in it and a lot of Cornelia's time.

His sister made no objection to this. She was devoted to her brother and she loved responsibility and planning and achieving.

She didn't care very much about New Plymouth, but it was Harley's hobby, and she was more than ready to help him.

The big enterprise he had undertaken would cost a great amount of money, but he had formed a sort of syndicate, and interested a few other men in the plan. He expected to put in the most capital, and therefore he expected to be at the head of the whole affair, and this was as it should be, for no other had his zeal and energy, or a sister to help him.

Also, the business meant a greatly changed will to be put into the hands of his executors when the proper time came.

Up to now, his will, had been simple, leaving his entire fortune to his sister and his two nephews who lived with him, with ample provision for dependents and for charities.

But now he proposed to bequeath his large estate in a different manner. Two-thirds of his he was now building up, and possessions would go to the town which he hoped would be a city by that time. The other third of his estate would be divided equally among his sister and his two nephews.

He had discussed this with Cornelia and she had agreed to his wishes. She was not mercenary and wanted only enough to live in the way she had always lived, which she could easily do on the legacy she would receive.

being severe. Children and dogs liked her, though she seldom had occasion to play with either of them.

The two young men of the family were, according to their aunt, "ducky angels." Craig Madison was the son of Harley's brother, and Tom Sheldon was the son of his sister. Both orphans, Harley had fathered them for 10 or a dozen years and Cornelia had ably filled the place of a mother to both.

But the kingpin, the capsheaf of the whole establishment was Mrs. Hetty Garson, housekeeper. Really, Cornelia was the keeper of the house, but Cornelia was of the chateleine type. Had she happened in the Middle Ages, she would have adored going about with a big ring of jangling keys and a long-peaked headgear with a clattering veil.

So, at Silver Hill, Cornelia was the housekeeper de luxe; Hetty was the working model. And work she did! And she could get work out of other people. Why, if Hetty got after her, even that perky little Agnes, the parlor maid, would do some work and like it!

Agnes was a thorn in Hetty's flesh. She was so pretty that the young men in the family could not help looking at her, and the more Hetty warned her not to noze these looks, the more coy and self-conscious Aggie became, and consequently, the prettier.

Miss Cornelia was meticulous about her employees' uniforms, and the parlor maid wore a neat black silk frock and a filmy white apron with frills. On her yellow hair sat a bit of pleated white stuff like a tiara, with a scrap of black velvet by way of mourning.

Hetty, too, wore black silk, taffeta in the morning, grosgrain of an afternoon. She was tall and thin, scrawny is a better word, and her muscular power was evident. Not exactly a member of the family, she was a privileged character, and on Sunday evening, Craig was telling his uncle about the film star he had met and invited to the house, Hetty walked into the living room and sat down to listen.

"Do I take it," she said, "that a bold-faced jig from the movies is coming to this house?"

"Be careful what you take, Hetty," said Craig. "The lady is a friend of mine, and I forbid any further expressions such as you just used. Miss Verne will come on Friday and remain over the week end. You will watch your step. Get me?"

Hetty flounced out of the room, and Harley Madison said, in his quiet way, "I sometimes think, Cornelia, that we've spoiled Hetty, and if we're not careful she'll get out of hand."

"I'm afraid that's true, Harley," his sister agreed. "I'll speak to her. And I can assure you, Craig, that Hetty will do or say nothing that can possibly annoy Miss Verne."

"You bet she won't," said Tom Sheldon. "I say, Craig, how did you manage to get her? Those film stars are hard to come by. Maybe she won't come, after all."

"Maybe she won't," said Craig, placidly. "But she wasn't a bit actress, just a natural, well-bred girl."

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 152

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Janette and Dr. Wong began their journey—apparently their last—through the corridors of Ahele's palace. Presently they were joined by a chapter of priests, chanting their songs of praise to the hideous god Pantu, who was soon to consume these sacrificial victims.

"Oh, Dr. Wong, is there any hope left?" Janette implored. A brave smile touched the lips of the Chinese. "It seems that my august ancestors, to whom I had addressed my pleas for protection have suddenly been stricken deaf. But they may be restored to hearing."

The procession turned a corner. "Oh!" Janette exclaimed, "this is the passage that leads to the Hall of Pantu. How well I remember it. I'm afraid your guiding spirits have deserted us, Dr. Wong." The solemn cortege halted. A giant door swung slowly open.

There, in the great hall, sat the horrible image of Pantu. Beneath the stones at its feet Janette knew, lay the sleeping Fires of Tohr, ready to spring into devouring flames. Ahele stood for a moment observing the awful scene. Then she commanded harshly, "Enter!"
